

Yea, but most Ladles have disdainful minds,
to refuse such I

ECHO, Few
such!

In what space, shall I know, whether her love resteth in honour?

ECHO, In one hour ! O for such a sweet hour ! My life of hours will I pray then !

ECHO, Ay
then!

Then if I find, as I would; more bold to urge her, I may be so?

ECHO, Be
so!

But if she do refuse I then, woe to th'Attempter!

ECHO, Attempt
her! She will proudly refuse! She speaks in jest never I

ECHO,

Ever!

So though still She refuse. She speaks in jest
ever !

ECHO,

Ever!

Then such as these, be the true best signs
to seek out such ?'

ECHO, Seek out
such! Such will I seek ! But what shall I do, when I first shall attempt her I

ECHO, Tempt
her!

How shall I tempt her, ere She stand on terms of her honour ?

ECHO, On
her!

O might I come to that! I think 'tis even
so.

ECHO, 'Tis even so ! Strongly to tempt and move, at first,
is surely the best then ?

ECHO. The best then!

What, when they do repugn, yet cry not forth ! will they do then ?

ECHO, Do
then!

With such a blunt Proem, Ladies, shall I move never ?

ECHO, Ever
t

I must wait, on an inch, on such Nymphs
whom I regard so;

ECHO, Guard
so!

Those whom, in heart, I love; my faith doth firmly deserve such.

ECHO,      Serve
such! Then to become their slaves, is no great dishonour ?

ECHO,      Honour!
But to the Muses, firsty I will recommend her I

ECHO,      Commend her!
